Graphic new footage, photos of GuZoo emerge

Controversy. Owner of Alberta roadside attraction says he feels privacy violated

Animal rights activists are demanding the Alberta government reopen its investigation into the controversial roadside GuZoo after new footage and photos have surfaced depicting what it claims are poor living standards and safety hazards for exotic animals housed on site.

The nearly 10-minute video shows what appears to be filth in numerous birdcages and fridges, maggots crawling in a bowl of food set next to a baby lynx and other domestic cats, and at least four animal carcasses scattered outdoors among piles of other garbage.

Metro obtained the photos from the Council of Concerned

Albertans for Animal Welfare and Public Safety.

"I'm horrified," said Lexci Johnston, council vice-president. "You don't have to be an animal lover to look at baby animals in the care of able-bodied humans being presented maggots. That baby lynx is what they hand out to kids to take pictures with, meanwhile that thing's got a belly full of parasites."

GuZoo, located near Three Hills, Alta., previously came under fire in 2011 after photos of public areas that many deemed sub-standard sparked a viral social media campaign calling for its closure.

Reached Sunday, owner Lynn Gustafson confirmed the video was taken by what he suspects was a trespasser over the Canada Day long weekend. He also conceded there were maggots in the cat food and carcasses on the trash piles but chalked it up to everyday operations on a farm that's home to nearly 400 domestic and exotic animals. "It's all bulls-t," Gustafson said, adding he suspects a visit from SPCA officials Friday was linked to the footage. "You can make anything you want out of it. I could go to your house and find something that's wrong probably."

Gustafson said the maggots in the cat cage swarmed after he accidentally left some food in there overnight, adding, "That wasn't what they were eating anyway."

As for the carcasses, Gustafson claims he was going to burn them but the weather was too damp and they were kept well away from public areas.

The council said it was sent 200 photos and video from an anonymous whistleblower.

Jumping all in. Skydiving soldier safely lands — on one knee

Love came floating out of the sky and into the Stampede Grounds Sunday afternoon.

When Sgt. Daniel Jenkins, a member of the SkyHawks Canadian Forces parachute team, landed on the chuckwagon track, he dropped to one knee and proposed to his girlfriend of two years.

Cpl. Jennifer Swanson, also with the Canadian military, never it saw it coming, but replied with an excited "yes."

"My heart is pumping. It is amazing," said Swanson, who was still visibly shaking, moments after the proposal.

Jenkins and Śwanson, both from Edmonton, met seven years ago through friends, but reconnected shortly before both were deployed to Afghanistan

They did manage to squeeze in a couple of dates before they were each deployed to separate parts of the country.

Swanson is currently on vacation and was at the grounds Sunday to watch Jenkins jump for her first time.

The pair will be moving to Trenton, Ont., next week.

Jenkins planned the proposal long before the jump took place. When he got word that he had made the SkyHawks team in March, he put the plan in motion

"I wanted to do something big and fantastic, which is pretty easy for us to do," he

Jenkins had already begun his proposal when another member of the skydiving team was seriously injured after taking a hard fall on the chuckwagon track.

A Canadian Forces skydiver sustained potentially lifethreatening injuries after a rough landing on the Stampede grounds around 2 p.m. Sunday, according to EMS officials.

The skydiver was conscious after the fall, according to EMS spokesperson Chelsie Small, who said he was in stable but "serious, potentially life-threatening condition" when he was transported to Foothills Hospital.

"With potentially lifethreatening (injuries), you can still be conscious," Small said. "He did sustain significant, traumatic injuries."

EMS was quick to aid the fallen skydiver, a member of the SkyHawks Canadian Forces parachute team, and he was transported off the track within 20 minutes of the crash.

Curious kitty trapped for 5 days, rescued

Hours-long effort to free frightened Samson from small Oakridge enclosure

JEREMY NOLAIS jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

You've heard of a cat stuck in a tree, but how about one trapped under a home for five days?

Well, that's exactly the predicament four-year-old black tabby Samson found himself in until some fire-fighters, neighbours and frantic caregivers teamed up to dig him out from under an Oakridge abode early Sunday.

Kim Levenson had been caring for Samson while friend and owner Carla Sasley was in Manitoba. But on good clothes.

"It was a little angry — my guys told me about that. We had good equipment, good gloves and

Ernie Molineaux, Calgary Fire Department Battalion Chief, on rescuing a slightly per-

Tuesday the curious yet cautious kitty ventured out of the house and vanished.

"I had no idea where he went," Levenson said. "I went up and down the block in the middle of the night with a flashlight like a burglar. I posted signs with a $200 reward, he's on Kijiji, you name it."

Levenson thought she heard some meowing near her home Wednesday but couldn't locate the source.

"Everybody thought I'd lost my marbles," she said.

Finally, Saturday night, the cat calls intensified and Levenson became convinced Samson was nearby.

She and her son ventured into the garage and up on the roof before finally determining the noise was coming from underneath their feet.

Firefighters were called to the scene and determined Samson had climbed under the back-porch steps and tunnelled his way to the front corner of the house. At first, attempts were made to lure the cat back the way he came, but Samson was having none of it. Crews then decided to burrow underneath a sidewalk running adjacent to the home, providing a shorter route to freedom.

"There were even tree roots they had to cut away," said Sasley, who returned home Saturday and raced over after being alerted by Levenson.

"It took two-and-a-half hours to get to him ... he was curled up in a ball."

Both owner and caregiver were quick to pay credit to the firefighters.

"We knew they were busy with the flood — we thought nobody was going to come, but they did," Levenson said. "I wasn't going to give up on him, even if it made people deabt me."

Samson was doing well on Sunday afternoon. He's lost weight and was tad grubby after his ordeal, but Sasley was confident her prized feline would pull through just fine.

"He's sleeping on his usual chair now," she said. "He's doing good."

Recycling piling up as city returns to blue-bins

Suspension of blue-bin recycling has led to a bit of a cardboard logjam in some Calgary communities while others have flocked back to old-fashioned disposal spots like the bottle depot.

The service, launched in 2009, is set to return Monday after being put on hold for more than two weeks while the city responded to severe flooding in several areas.

And while no one speaking to Metro Sunday lamented the city for its decision to divert recycling efforts elsewhere, mother Hiley Thompson said she'll be happy to see the trucks return.

"We are a little backed up," she said Sunday. "We have our whole bin full of cardboard and two other containers, too."

Thompson said in her Bridgeland neighbourhood many continued putting out their bin on the designated pickup day and then stacked items on top even once it filled to the brim.

On Wednesday, Mayor Naheed Nenshi conceded few appear to have broken their blue-bin habit during the flood crisis

"Last week I told you that approximately 96 per cent of Mayor Nenshi noted waste and recycling crews have been extremely busy elsewhere, as city landfills had taken in more than 31,000 tonnes of flood water, about five months worth in two weeks.

people had their blue carts out, even though they're not being collected," he said. "Today it was much better: Only about 91 per cent of people."

Stampede 101 is actually the 93rd 'official' event

This year's Greatest Show on Earth is billed as "Stampede 101" but that shouldn't be confused to mean it's the 101st annual event, according to a local historian and Stampede organizers.

"This year is the 91st consecutive Stampede, but there were two official Stampedes before that, making it (number) 93," said Harry Sanders, the Calgary Heritage Authority's 2012 historian laureate.

Those previous two events were the original Stampede in 1912 and the "Great Victory Stampede"

Historically speaking...

in 1919, held after the end of the First World War.

To complicate the total Stampede count a touch further, however, there was another "unofficial" event held in 1916.

"During the First World War, a group of veterans put on the Veterans' Stampede," Sanders said.

That event did not include Stampede founder Guy Weadick or "the Big Four" financial backers of the initial "official" events, he said.

The Stampede, itself, clarified this year's billing and its #Stampede101 hashtag on Twitter.

"#Stampede101 does not refer to the 101st edition, it refers to 101 years since the first stampede," it tweeted Sunday.

Calgary's tech wild, wild west

IN DAY 1 OF OUR SERIES ON CALGARY'S GROWING STARTUP SCENE, WE LOOK AT SOME OF THE PEOPLE AND PRODUCTS WHO HAVE FOUND HOMEGROWN SUCCESS IN THE TECH WORLD, YOU MAY BE SURPRISED TO LEARN HOW MANY BIG PLAYERS GOT THEIR START RIGHT HERE

KATIE TURNER/METRO

Calgary's history is one of striking it rich underground, but some of the city's most successful entrepreneurs have lassoed the world of high-tech to create their own wild, wild west.

From websites and apps to software, Sean Collins of Startup Calgary says the city has a history of entrepreneurs who have made it big in the technology industry, and there's a growing "ecosystem" waiting in the wings.

"I think that one of the reasons that people move to Calgary or stay in Calgary is because it's a land of crazy opportunity," he said. "It's about convincing and communicating to people the power of a new industry. Let's harness the wild, wild west."

Patrick Lor, one of Calgary's technology pioneers, sold his company for what he describes as mere millions — practically chump change when compared to tech giants such as YouTube.

But the entrepreneur and co-founder of iStockphoto used that windfall to reinvest in Calgary's growing tech-startup ecosystem, and is about to launch his next endeavour.

Lor jumped into the tech industry in the 1990s, working for a division of Adobe Systems.

"We sold clipart, fonts and photographs," he said. "That was sort of my start in the in-lion. When I say 'only,' I don't mean to belittle that amount," he said. "There are companies that have sold for a couple of hundred million that you've never heard of."

Since selling iStockphoto, which is still based in Calgary, Lor has remained active in the city's startup ecosystem, acting as a mentor and investor for budding entrepreneurs.

"When I talk to smart people and they're working on fantastic ideas, you get such a charge out of it," he said.

His biggest piece of advice for those with an idea is simply to go out and do it, without being afraid to fail. "I think that vou have to create. Get out there and do something," he said. "We emphasize too much research and reading and not enough experience."

Once again, Lor is creating a new product. Dissolve.com follows many of the same principles as iStockphoto, but this time with video. The site lets filmmakers submit video stories, which users can then buy for stock video.

"My business has always been helping people create better marketing materials," he said. "Within a couple of months we were able to assemble a world-class team, all right here in Calgary. These guys, I couldn't have hired anywhere else in the world."

Entrepreneur sees great potential in Calgary

More than two decades of successfully building and growing technology companies — one of which he sold to Bill Gates — and Brad Zumwalt has stayed put in Calgary.

His extensive resumé includes a stint at Adobe, founding EyeWire.com, which was acquired by Getty Images, and, in 2007, selling his company Veer to Corbis — a privately held company owned by Bill Gates — for an undisclosed amount.

With that kind of success, Zumwalt could go just about anywhere, but he has remained in Calgary, a city he believes has great potential in the technology industry over the coming decade.

"To be this close to energy and energy technology is a really interesting advantage for Calgary," he said. "I think there's a spirit and a level of innovation in Calgary that

Living in the heart of oil country has several benefits, and Zumwalt argues one doesn't have to be in Silicon Valley to grow a technology business.

"We're kind of an affluent city, so there's people that want to push ideas ahead and have some capital to try out a new idea with.

Lac-Mégantic train disaster. Police say it's inevitable more missing will be declared dead

About 40 people were still missing Sunday evening after the spectacular blaze and explosions that razed much of Lac-Mégantic, Que., increasing the likelihood that the number of fatalities could soar from the official death toll of five.

"We have to be careful with that number because it could go up or down," said provincial police Lt. Michel Brunet

It was the first time police went public with an estimate since the derailment of a train carrying crude oil Saturday morning. Police said a higher death toll is inevitable.

Two of the train cars were still burning on Sunday morning, hampering the search for victims in the debris.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper visited the town of 6,000 — about 250 kilometres east of Montreal — on Sunday and likened it to a "war zone."

Throughout the day, people streamed in and out of the town's evacuee shelter. Some who gathered outside wiped tears as they braced for bad news about their loved ones.

Henri-Paul Audette headed there in hope of reuniting with his missing brother. Audette, 69, said his brother's apartment was next to the railroad tracks, very close to the spot where the train derailed.

"I had thought ... that I would see him."

David Vachon said he has one friend whose sister is missing and another who is still searching for his mother.

The cause of the accident is a runaway train, according to the railway's operator.

The president and CEO of Rail World Inc. said the train was parked uphill of Lac-Mégantic before it became loose and began careening downhill.

Air taxi crashes, killing all 10 people on board

An air taxi crashed at an airport in Alaska on Sunday morning, killing all 10 people on board, according to U.S. authorities.

Meagan Peters of the Alaska State Troopers said the fixed-wing aircraft was engulfed in flames at the Soldotna Airport before firefighters could get there. The victims had not been identified by Sunday night.

National Transportation Safety Board investigator Clint Johnson said initial reports had the accident happening as the plane took off.

Flying across the vast northern state is common for Alaska residents, despite hazards including treacherous mountain passes and volatile weather.

Coroner determining whether one girl was hit, killed by a rescue vehicle

The two Chinese teenagers who died in an Asiana Airlines plane crash in San Francisco were student leaders who excelled in their studies and in the arts — one was a calligrapher and the other a pianist.

Wang Linjia, 16, and Ye Mengyuan, 17, were students in eastern China who were travelling on a summer camp program to visit universities in California, state media reported Monday.

The group included 29 students and four teachers from four schools in the city of Jiangshan. They were to visit Silicon Valley, Stanford University and the University of California's campuses in Los Angeles and Berkeley, according to the Youth Times, an official newspaper in Zhejiang province.

Wang was class representative for three years, and teachers and schoolmates described her as excelling in physics and being good at calligraphy and drawing, according to the paper. Wang's next-door neighbour, a woman surnamed Xia, described Wang as being quiet, courteous and diligent.

"Every time she came home she would be studying; very rarely did she go out and play," Xia was quoted as saying. She said Wang's father proudly displayed her calligraphy and art pieces on the walls of his office.

The other victim, Ye, also was a top student who excelled in literature and was talented with the piano, singing and gymnastics. The Youth Times said Ye had recently won a national gymnastics competition and routinely received honours at her school's speech contests.

A U.S. county coroner said Sunday that his office is conducting an autopsy to determine whether one of the two girls was run over by an emergency vehicle, hastening or even causing her death.

When you can't take the heat

As temperatures soared across the country in recent weeks, heartbreaking stories emerged of children dying and dozens of dogs being rescued after being left unattended in parked cars. Metro reporter Ruth Davenport got a sense of how it feels to be in a hot car when she spent 40 minutes in a parked vehicle on a day when the humidex pushed the temperature to a mugay 37 C.

At 10 minutes ...

This isn't so bad. I feel like I'm wearing a heavy sweater in a sauna, but I'm not thirsty, short of breath or in distress. Despite having the window cracked, the dollar-store thermometer has climbed to

At 15 minutes ...

I'm sweating profusely now, taking a lot of deep breaths and yawning consistently.

'Your body is responding to the heat by changing its cardiovascular reserve," says Halifax physician Dr. John Gillis. "As you start to get dehydrated, your heart rate goes up.... Your body is trying to make sure oxygen is replaced, hence the deeper breaths."

At 20 minutes ...

I'm uncomfortably hot and unpleasantly soggy. imaginary sweater has gotten tight and I'm feeling pressure over my nose and mouth. The thermometer needle has climbed past the maximum temperature of 49 C.

At 25 minutes ...

The heat is getting intolerable, and I'm dizzy and drowsy - enough to want to close my eyes and go to sleep.

"Confusion goes along with it," Gillis says. "It's a continuum from feeling groggy to being profoundly confused as your body starts to react in different ways."

At 30 minutes ...

My heart is thumping faster and harder than normal, I'm starting to puff a little, and I just feel too hot. My face in particular is burning as though I'm bending over a hot stove, but I can't pull away. I'm in distress — a child would be in danger.

"They have less moisture on board, they have less ability to regulate their surface area in terms of their ability to sweat," Gillis says. "Everything's different, and their ability to cry for help - it's quite unfortunate."

At 35 minutes ...

I'm torn between staying another five minutes or escaping this rancid, sweltering, child or dog wouldn't get the choice, so I decide - with some genuine apprehension for my well-being — to stay. My head droops.

At 40 minutes ...

It's a relief to step out of the car into the baking parking lot. I'm sucking in deep breaths, and stagger a little on the way to the office. I drink water slowly and flatten ice packs on my face and neck. Î feel sluggish, drained, even a little hungover, and it takes almost another 40 minutes for me to feel normal again. The experiment has been unpleasantly informative, and not one I'd care to repeat.

Employment. Number of temps in U.S. has jumped more than 50% since recession ended Hiring is exploding in the one corner of the U.S. economy where few want to be hired: Temporary work.

From Walmart to General Motors to PepsiCo, companies are increasingly turning to temps and to a much larger universe of freelancers, contract workers and consultants.

Combined, these workers number nearly 17 million people who have only tenuous ties to the companies that pay them — about 12 per cent of everyone with a job.

Hiring is always healthy for an economy. Yet the rise in temp and contract work shows that many employers aren't willing to hire for the long run.

The number of temps has jumped more than 50 per cent since the recession ended four years ago to nearly 2.7 million — the most on government records dating to 1990. In no other sector has hiring come might just change that. An energy plant project set for construction in 2014 will turn manure into electricity for Ontario's power grid, after a 50-day "digestion" process. "It works basically like a big concrete stomach," said Daniel Bida, executive director of the ZooShare project.

The power plant plans to harness the energy of excrement by taking 3,000 tonnes of manure from rhinos and other large animals at the zoo, as well as 14,000 tonnes of grocery-store waste, and breaking it down to produce a combination of electricity, heat and fertilizer.

The waste mixture will be fed into an anaerobic digestion chamber - which is kept at the same temperature as a cow's stomach - and millions of bacteria slowly break down the waste.

"It represents an excellent opportunity to showcase the bio gas process."

Paul Whittam, Toronto Zoo's manager of financial services

After almost two months, the result is a fertilizer product and a combination of methane and carbon dioxide. The gases are then burned to produce electricity. "We are essentially able to operate the plant for 24 hours a day, seven days a week as long as the waste keeps coming and the bacteria keeps eating," he said.

The project moved a step closer to reality recently, when the ZooShare Biogas Co-operative signed a 20-year contract with the Ontario Power Authority. "The power we all consume when we turn on the lights, it'll be part of that," Bida said. 'We're excited to roll up our sleeves and get to work.'

STAMPEDE SHAMING NOT OK

It's like clockwork every July: Cowboy hats everywhere, pancake breakfasts and anticowboy, anti-Stampede discussion popping up on social media.

As soon as the beer tents are popping up and loafers are replaced by cowboy boots downtown, my newsfeed starts to fill up with haters openly knocking tourists, cowboy culture, the Stampede and any female who has the audacity to show too much skin.

In a discussion with a friend this past weekend, we realized that if someone was openly making fun of the Calgary Pride pa rade and its participants, they'd be branded a homophobe (and rightly so).

If some knuckle-dragging troglodyte was mocking Carfiest or Festival Latino, they would be called out for being a bigot (and an idiot).

Call a girl a tramp for wearing a short skirt? You're a slut-shaming chauvinist (at best).

James Callsen calgary@metronews.ca

But when it's Stampede time, it seems perfectly fine and acceptable in some social circles to refer to anyone in western wear as a redneck, white-trash idiot.

Why trash talk visitors to our town, especially when downtown businesses need the foot traffic this year more than ever?

How is it OK and celebrated to hate on anything Stampede related, when taking a swipe at any other festival would make you an outright jerk?

These same people would be outraged at openly hoping for the destruction of another cultural festival in our great city (oh right, let me guess, the Stampede isn't a cultural festival? Yawn.)

Worst of the worst are those who think it's OK to refer to any woman showing a little too much skin in a cowboy hat a slut or a tramp.

Just because someone is deciding to have a good time

Like Chinooks and Deerfoot gridlock Friday afternoon, the Stampede is a constant in our city. It's not going anywhere. Even a once-in-100-year flood can't stop the Greatest Outdoor Show On Earth, so if you're not with it, pipe down or get out of town.

It's not for everyone, just like the Folk Fest, AfricaDey and Sled Island aren't for everyone. But just because it's the oldest and biggest party in town, it doesn't mean it's OK to rip on someone who likes to enjoy it, especially if they've made our city part of their travel destination.

One of the greats

"To witness a concentration of birds like this is. without a doubt. one of the greatest ornithological experiences in the world."

Martin Harvey, wildlife photographer

Why this stinky lake?

For many animals, Lake Bogoria would be the last place to gather: the volcanic geysers and fumaroles that belch sulphurous effluent into the lake make it so alkaline that it's extremely difficult to support any aquatic life. But for flamingos, the lake is an eating paradise: it's extremely rich in blue-green algae, which the birds thrive upon. METRO

Fun flamingo facts:

- What makes them pink. The pigment beta-carotene in their diet from algae and shrimp give them their famous colour.
- How they find a mate. Courtship rituals include neck stretching, synchronized dancing and honkina.

Mother Mother mine bright ideas from some dark places

Balancing act.

Vancouver indie act treads a delicate line, mixing weight and whimsy in their music

ALEXANDRA CAVALLO

Metro World News in New York

If the only Mother Mother song you've ever heard is their chipper — and catchy as hell — single Bright Idea (featured in a series of Kraft Cheese commercials) you might get the idea that they're a sugar-poppy, radio-friendly outfit. You'd be mistaken.

In fact, the Vancouver quintet's music (loosely described here as indie-rock, though their eclectic, eccentric sound defies such generalizing classification) is markedly cerebral — and decidedly dark. "I like people and the human condition," says frontman and guitarist Ryan Guldemond, of the inspiration for their songs' artfully crafted, eloquent (and oftentimes odd) lyrics.

"But not in the lovely ways, more in the sad or bleak ways. And I like kind of drawing out the comedy in those things."

It's that delicate line between light and dark, weight and whimsy, that is Mother Mother's hallmark. And it's a line they walk with practiced ease.

At first listen, the darker undertones of their music might not be immediately apparent. Indeed, admits Guldemond, "I think that a lot of people don't necessarily hear it, and they come out with this misguided idea that we're a happy band with a happy message. Because it's not totally common for people to listen too closely to lyrics these days."

Not to listen closely would be a disservice to both listener and musician, as it's the complex (and sometimes head-scratching) lyricism that makes this relatively under-the-radar band (they're big in their homeland but, "America is a tough nut to crack ... where there's not that automatic domestic embrace, you kind of have to hustle a little harder and bank on certain cosmic aspects like luck and serendipity," he says) so interesting. But Guldemond is the first to admit that while Mother Mother is prone to meandering, verbose songwriting, there is something to be said for brevity, now more than ever.

ever.

"You do have to be very immediate in today's popular music genre," he muses.
"And it's almost harder to be

In the moment

Keeping it real — in music and in approaching their part of the world — seems to be what Guldemond and his bandmates are all about. When taking the stage, he says, he tries to remind himself to stay in the moment. "It is the one little window during the day where you can let loose a bit. I find it curious when bands on tour, when they play, they look excruciatingly bored or something. Not to say that they need to be animated — there can be a lot of passion in stillness — but that's different than just looking like you're bored or not having a good time," he says.

simple and immediate with something than it is to take your time. I was talking to a new music composer recently — and this is a guy who does not listen to pop, who does not exist in this world, but he's quite a brilliant musician and composer, and very cerebral and creates these long musical journeys — and he was saying that he finds writing a three minute pop song far more difficult than writing, you know, a 20-minute long avant garde piece for 18 musicians. I think there's a lot of truth in that. It's harder to cut to the chase than it is to be long-winded."

Yo La Tengo have no plans to Fade

There are people who credit Yo La Tengo with defining the genre of indie rock. One, writer/ fellow musician Jesse Jarnow, wrote an entire book about it, Big Day Coming: Yo La Tengo and the Rise of Indie Rock. If it's true, it's a pretty epic legacy. If you ask frontman and cofounder Ira Kaplan, however, he's reluctant to even entertain the idea.

"That's something that really does not enter into our life much," he explains, in his slow, thoughtful way. "Even the notion of indie rock is nothing I'm particularly fond of. I don't really know what it is. On a personal level, when somebody says that to me — not when someone writes it, but when a band says that to me — it is meaningful, and I'm happy. I mean I'm proud of what we've done, and I am happy when someone finds it inspiring, but I think about it as little as possible."

One wonders if, after putting out 13 studio albums (not to mention the countless collaborations, covers and compilations.) they ever hit a creative wall. "It doesn't seem that way. Maybe our standards are too low," laughs Kaplan. "I would say that every time we finish making a record, that's pretty much the only time I think about that. You always figure, well it's got to run out some time ... but it seems to just happen that at a certain point we all kind of know we're ready and get to work."

Fade is the most recent product of that work, and it's the trio's tightest album in more than a decade. "We did consciously make this new record a shorter record, thinking that we had made so many 70-minute records in a row, and we wanted to challenge ourselves to do something more succinct," he says.

Still, "I wouldn't use the Still, "I wouldn't use the word concession," he continues. "I wanted to know for myself that we could do something shorter. So it wasn't a concession, it was a challenge. Certainly nobody was demanding it but us."

Riding the toddler roller coaster — and I don't even like rides

Temper tantrums. All kids throw them at one point or another. Here's how one mom handled her little girl's worst meltdown yet

ummyMummyClub.ca

A few weeks ago my incredibly brave three-year-old took my mother by the hand and pulled her toward the Dragon Roller Coaster at Centreville, the kidfriendly amusement park on Toronto's Centre Island.

My mom went with her because I refused to. I don't like roller coasters.

After the ride, my daughter looked slightly terrified, but also extremely proud of herself. My mom said that as the ride began, she looked over at Willow and noticed a look of panic on her face. "Just close your eyes and scream," my mother told her. And so the two of them did just that.

Somehow this has come to be a perfect metaphor for life with a toddler. Despite the fact that I really, really don't like roller coasters, it seems I'm riding one — on a daily basis. This past weekend was the most frightening.

Perhaps it was the heat or her beloved daycare teacher announcing she'd be leaving at the end of the week or maybe it was just because she's three.

No matter the reason, the roller coaster ride began midweek and continued through Saturday, culminating in the longest, loudest temper tantrum I've yet to experience.

What made this particular ride so terrifying was how unpredictable it was. One minute our little girl was her usual, happy self and the next, we were all running for cover.

How did I handle all of this?
As most roller coasters do.

As most roller coasters do, this one started out slowly. I braced myself. I tried to ignore the unreasonable protests. I tried to divert her attention. And I asked her calmly what was bothering her.

But, the louder her screams got, the harder it became to ignore. She didn't want the new wagon we had just bought her. She didn't want to take a bath. She wasn't tired. She didn't need to eat something.

I wanted the ride to stop so I tried reasoning with her. "What's really making you so upset?" "Can you please stop yelling?" "Let's go do something fun." No such luck.

The louder she got, the more panicky I felt.

Get. Me. Off. This. Ride.

Every time the roller coaster seemed to be slowing down, I'd take a deep breath. But then it would start up again. I'm pretty sure I cried. I definitely said, "I can't do this" about a hundred times. And finally, when I just couldn't take it anymore, I took my mom's advice. I closed my eyes and screamed. (Actually, my mom's advice is to read parenting books, which I bought but haven't read yet.)

Thank goodness, Sunday morning the roller coaster came to a full stop. My little girl woke up smiling and remained in a good mood all day.

But the thing with the toddler roller coaster is, you never know when it will start up again. Yumnymumyclub.ca is an online resource to help women survive motherhood

How to bring some | A world where

summer with these easy email tips

FURLAN

Inbox zero might as well be the lost city of Atlantis for most people. Between work and personal email addresses — not even counting Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn and other social media — it's nearly impossible to escape the constant uptick of unread messages that come in from every corner of the digital universe.

As summer gets into gear and emails pile up over coveted vacations, we checked in with life coach Stacy Kim, founder of the company LifeJunctions about how to make sure email overload doesn't take over our relaxing summers.

Tip 1: One thing at a time

Unfortunately for us - and contrary to what many of our bosses believe - there is no such thing as multi-tasking, Kim says. "There is a lot of research about how our brains don't really multitask. We don't do two things at once, we just switch back and forth really quickly," she says. All this switching between tasks is often the root of people's anxiety and stress problems. "The more you can do just one thing at a time, I think that's the number one suggestion that I give everybody," Kim says. "And I try and remember that myself," she adds, laughing. "For example, when I'm checking an email and somebody else pings me in any other format, I try not to respond until I'm done. If I do switch, I make a conscious decision to switch."

Tip 2: A few focused minutes go a long way

The email deluge can be particularly bad after taking a long weekend or a few days away from work. Kim says that to avoid stress, people should set aside a chunk of time and try to prioritize. "Go through very quickly and try to remember that when you go on vacation, you're going to come back to a lot of email. Most people understand that and understand you won't get back to them right away," Kim says. Prioritizing which emails need responses first is key to making sure they are dealt with.

"You say, 'I'm going to make a note of that' and go to the next one," she says, adding that you should aim for a chunk of focused minutes of email-checking. "When you check it, you may have to spend more time, but you're not going to check it as often,"

The business of breath

Inhale. Exhale. (Then do it again.)

- What many of us don't notice is that facing an email inbox stuffed with stress and anxiety can cause us to hold our breath — and that's bad news for all kinds of things, according to Kim.
- "When you have to check your email, give yourself a few huge, deep breaths from your diaphragm," Kim suggests. "Taking a moment to breathe really does help decrease your stress levels. I don't think I can stop the emails none of us can stop them but what we can try to do is control the responses we have to them."

Scott Barry Kaufman encourages everyone to hold on to that feeling of being brilliant regardless of what the tests tell you

BRUCE WALSH

After being rejected from Carnegie Mellon University due to his SAT scores, Scott Barry Kaufman was determined to prove that he had the chops to excel at the university.

Eventually he was accepted to the prestigious school as a transfer, and he went on to graduate Phi Beta Kappa in 2003. He later received a master's degree from Cambridge, as well as a doctorate from Yale. He now works as a cognitive psychologist.

So why did the SAT determine that he didn't have the mental chops?

In his latest book, Ungifted: Intelligence Redefined, Kaufman attempts to get to the bottom of that question - for himself, and for students everywhere who find themselves falling through the cracks.

All work, no play makes summer staff a sad bunch

From mopey to high morale. Kick your colleagues into high gear with a few grateful gestures

Summer's officially here, and with it comes barbecues, parties and outdoor activities a-plenty. But for the majority of adults, weekdays are usually spent grinding it out to earn a paycheque. With some effort, however, companies can make work more enjoyable for their employees by taking the time to show appreciation — and by having a little fun.

The warm weather offers companies an opportunity to host outdoor functions with the purpose of rewarding employees for their contribution to the company's success.

Shaking it up at work can be extremely beneficial, say specialists in this field. Simple gestures such as a manager bringing in coffee and snacks to celebrate the successful completion of a project or task, can speak volumes to those who put in extra hours and go out of their way to support the team

"Stocking up your breakroom with snacks and beverages for employees is an easy way to boost morale and show your appreciation," says Ilada Boriboun, category manager at Staples Advantage.

We like to party

- According to the survey findings of Staples Advantage Canada, who recently polled their customers about work satisfaction, 84 per cent of employees enjoy office events or parties, and 87 per cent look forward to such occasions to let loose and socialize with co-workers.
- And perhaps not surprisingly, this ties into work productivity.
 More than 80 per cent of those polled said they feel appreciated because their employers host team events, which has contributed to increased loyalty and job satisfaction.

Rodeo track. More than 800 people worked to fix Stampede infield track in just 10 days

KRISTA SYLVESTER

In 1974, it took four months to build the infield rodeo track, but the Calgary Stampede made it happen in just 10 days this year.

At its peak, there were more than 800 people working to fix the Calgary Stampede chuckwagon infield track from significant damage suffered from June's devastating flood that saw floodwaters crest upwards of 14 feet. Millions of gallons of water had to be removed and the dirt completely replaced, according to Stampede officials who say the track is better than ever.

Warren Connell, Calgary Stampede vice-president of park development, says he has been involved with the organization for 30 years and

Terrific shape

"We've taken a look at the bucking chutes, all the steel, all the runways, made sure it's all safe and it is."

Paul Rosenburg, Calgary Stampede vice-president of programming was shocked at the damage.

"It was overwhelming, obviously, to see the track wash away," Connell said. "I believe in '74, when the building was constructed, it took four months to build the track. We were given 10 days (this year), basically."

Officials say the floodwaters breached the track and, ultimately, caused the need to build the track from the bottom up with crews working around the clock to prepare the infield in a little more than a week. Pumping the water out took two days.

"Thirty-thousand yards of material were taken off of Stampede Park to another site to dry out and be tested before it was reclaimed and 30,000 yards of materials were brought onto Stampede Park."

There were early reports that some participants were worried about track safety, but Paul Rosenburg, Calgary Stampede vice-president of programming, says safety is paramount and everything surpasses standards.

"We've taken a look at the bucking chutes, all the steel, all the runways, made sure it's all safe and it is," Rosenburg said. "We've disinfected and we've put new dirt down, so, from an animal safety and care perspective, we're in terrific shape."

The popular Calgary Stampede Grandstand show will go ahead as planned and the sound system is ready to go, officials said.

While the repair bill will skyrocket into the millions, officials say Calgarians and visitors will have a great experience at this year's rodeo, chuckwagon and Grandstand Show despite the flood.

The bill to repair the Calgary Stampede infield track is expected to be in the millions of dollars. THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

We built this city. All you need in one place

It's that time of year when the Calgary Stampede becomes Alberta's third largest city.

While official numbers will be tallied at the end of the 10-day event, hundreds of thousands of visitors will descend upon Stampede Park, making it one of the most populated areas in the province if it were its own city each and every day.

"The size, a lot at over 100,000 people per day, makes the Stampede more populated than Red Deer or Lethbridge," said spokesperson Kurt Kadatz. "That actually makes it the third largest city in the province and that's why we call it a city within a city."

The Calgary Stampede can rely on itself for electricity and also boasts its own emergency services, recycling and waste services programs and, of course, food on a site that spans almost 200 acres. But what really makes the Stam-

If you are the type of person who is willing to try new food then the Calgary Stampede's variety of midway delicacies will surely hit the spot with choices that range from the downright delicious to the brazenly bizarre.

While many people seek thrills on the rides, a lot of guests can't wait to find out what unique and eccentric choices the Stampede has to offer each year, according to Calgary Stampede spokesperson Jennifer Booth. And this year there are more daring choices than ever.

"It's definitely a fan favourite to try new food at the park and the vendors really come up with unique and creative treats — it's actually become a bit of a tradition," Booth said.

Roping in big savings

Stampede deals. It's best to plan ahead if you are going to be watching your wallet this year

SYLVESTER

Calgarians might be counting their pennies a little more than usual this year at the Calgary Stampede because of the disaster, but there are still ways to have a good time without breaking the bank.

There are some tricks of the trade when it comes to watching your wallet at the Calgary Stampede and it's best to plan ahead, says Calgary Stampede spokesperson Jennifer Booth.

There are many ways that people can save some money while still having fun at the Stampede," Booth said. "Many ways include buying advance tickets and coupons for great prices, but there are a lot of ways to save money at the park, too."

Booth reminds guests of all the free attractions that come with the cost of the gate entry, including the fan favourite concerts on the Coca-Cola Stage, the ENMAX Ice Show, the SuperDogs and a litany of indoor attractions.

And who can forget the Stampede breakfasts. They are everywhere. You could have a free pancake breakfast every morning of the Stampede if you know where to look, and there just happens to be a schedule at caravan. calgarystampede.com/ which to take advantage.

There are great advance value offers available for families, but you can also take advantage of kids younger than 12 and accompanying adults getting in for free on July 10 during BMO Kids Day between 6-9 a.m., with a free pancake breakfast on the grounds between 8-9:30 a.m.

Seniors on a budget can take advantage of free admission day on July 9, which is Western Heritage Day.

Members of Costco are able to buy $50 worth of Stampede bucks for only $39.99, which is on sale until July 10 with a limited quantity. The Coca-Cola 2 for $24 is back once again and allows the purchase of two Calgary Stampede Park admissions for the special price of $24 at Macs between July 7-17.

There are also some easy tips for visitors to remember when coming down to the park. Everyone knows how much bottled water can cost so it's good to bring your own water in a refillable container. And while you're at it you can bring some snacks, too.

Simple ginger-lemon marinade holds secret to tasty chicken

nsereisman com

These Chicken Kabobs with Ginger-Lemon Marinade are an easy summertime recipe for the barbecue.

Change up the colour of the bell peppers and feel free to substitute peaches or plums for the pineapple. Fresh fruit is always preferred

Serve the kabobs over rice, couscous or quinoa.

- 1. Ginger-Lemon Marinade: In bowl, combine lemon juice, water, vegetable oil, sesame oil, vinegar, brown sugar, ginger, coriander, and fennel seeds; mix well. Add chicken and mix; marinate 20 minutes.
- 2. Alternately thread chicken cubes, green pepper, pineapple and tomatoes onto 4 long or 8 short barbecue skewers. Barbecue for 15 to 20 minutes or just until chicken is no longer pink inside, brushing often with marinade and rotating every 5 minutes. Murray finally the man at Wimbledon

Tennis. Scot ends 77-year drought of a British player capturing men's championship

Andy Murray needed one more point, one solitary point, to win Wimbledon — a title he yearned to earn for himself, of course, and also for his country.

Britain had endured 77 years since one of its own claimed the men's trophy at the revered tournament referred to simply as The Championships, and now here was Murray, on the brink of triumph after three hours of gruelling tennis against topseeded Novak Djokovic under a vibrant sun at Centre Court.

Up 40-love, Murray failed to convert his first match point. And his second. And then, yes, his third, too. On and on the contest, and accompanying tension, stretched, Murray unable to close it, Djokovic unwilling to yield, the minutes certainly feeling like hours to those playing and those watching. Along came three break points for Djokovic, all erased. Finally, on Murray's fourth chance to end it, Djokovic dumped a backhand into the net.

The final was over.
The wait was over.
A year after coming oh-so-close by losing in the title match at the All England Club, the No. 2-ranked Murray beat No. 1 Djokovic of Serbia 6-4, 7-5, 6-4 Sunday to become Wimbledon's champion in a test of will and skill between a pair of men with mirror-image defensive styles that created lengthy points brimming with superb shots.

"That last game will be the toughest game I'll play in my career. Ever," said Murray, who was born in Dunblane, Scotland, and is the first British man to win the grass-court Grand Slam tournament since Fred Perry in 1936. "Winning Wimbledon — I still can't believe it. Can't get my head

Eskimos pour it on in 1st to drop Ticats in damp opener

CFL. Edmonton improves to .500 as Hamilton disappoints following impressive debut

It was the wettest game that Edmonton quarterback Mike Reilly has ever played in, and that's saying something for a guy who played his college football in the rainy state of Washington.

"I've never seen it come down like that, especially for the entire game," said the 28-year-old who led the Eskimos to a 30-20 win over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on Sunday night with two touchdown passes and a 12-yard TD rush in a torrential downpour.

"It's tough. The ball gets heavy. It's getting slippery," he said, likening it to trying to catch a watermelon.

Edmonton had already jumped out to a 16-0 lead before the rains came and the Ti-cats were forced to play catchup in awful conditions.

Reilly completed 14-of-22 pass attempts for 130 yards.

It was the Ticats home opener at Alumni Stadium, home to the University of Guelph Gryphons, which was temporarily expanded this season to seat a capacity 13,000 while a new stadium is built in Hamilton.

Edmonton improved to 1-1 after a 39-18 loss to Saskatchewan last week. After putting up 34 points in last week's 39-34 loss to Toronto, the Ticats (0-2) could only muster 20 points in the weather.

MLB. Pitcher Redmond another unlikely hero for struggling Blue Jays

In a season where little has gone according to plan, it's perhaps no surprise that the Toronto Blue Jays have found some unlikely heroes.

up just one hit over five inr the Blue Jays on Sunday

With the Jays needing to fill a hole in their starting rotation, the 28-year-old from St. Petersburg, Fla., did not give up a hit until one out in the fifth when Aaron Hicks, batting eighth in the Twins lineup, homered over the right-field fence with one on to tie the score at 2-2.

Redmond struck out four and walked three in five innings, with the Toronto offence striking back for four runs in the bottom of the fifth to give him a 6-2 lead.

'It's still a dream come true just to be here," said Redmond. You've just got to take it one day at a time, one start at a time. And hopefully continue Colby Rasmus, Jose Reyes and Rajai Davis homered for Toronto, which outhit Minnesota 13-5 before 43,795 under a stuffy dome at Rogers Centre.

Redmond, earning his first career win in his second major-league start, has probably earned another start for the Jays (43-45).

T Aries March 21 - April 20

Few people have the guts to challenge you directly, which is why you must be on your guard for rivals who use underhand methods.

Taurus April 21 - May 21

You should be aiming high now and looking to make a name for yourself. Whatever field of endeavor you work in you have what it takes to reach the top.

II Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Steer clear of people who talk nicely to you in public then say bad things about you behind your back. You know who they are and you know why they act the way they do. It's because they envy you, with good reason.

Cancer June 22 - July 23

Today's new moon in your sign, combined with Saturn moving in your favor too, empowers you to be whoever you want to be and do whatever you want to do.

$\mathbf{\Omega}$ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

Common sense should tell you that certain opinions are best kept to yourself – and if common sense doesn't then the planets certainly do! Not everyone is ready to hear the truth, at least not from someone as outspoken as you.

W Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

This is a time of great opportunity, so make the most of it and don't waste a single second on trivial matters or trivial people.

△ Libra Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Someone in a position of authority will be full of themselves today but you may find it hard to share in their high spirits. That's a shame because, if you make nice, they will make an effort to boost your career.

M Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Saturn turns direct in your birth sign today. What does that mean in plain and simple language? It means you can no longer lie to yourself about a problem of some sort.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You are trying too hard to get something done. Today's influences urge you to slow down and not be quite so serious about your ambitions.

6 Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You need to get your ego out of the way and be less judgmental, both of other people and of yourself. Today's new moon will help you look at those around you with a more forgiving eye. Look in the mirror too.

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Go out of your way to be nice to people today. You can do it if you try!

H Pisces Feb. 20 - March 20

Today's new moon falls in the most creative area of your chart, so make sure you do something dynamic and decisive. Don't worry if you are short on experience or money – what you need the universe will provide. SALLY BROMPTON
